ATTACHMENT 1

The NSA recommended version of paragraph 4a is as follows:

4. Policy

a. Unofficial Travel. Unofficial visits to, or travel through, the countries listed in Annex A, may constitute an unnecessary security risk. Persons indoctrinated for access to SCI and possessing knowledge of current value may be prohibited from engaging in such visits or travel. The SIO concerned may grant exemptions for such visits or travel, however, he is responsible for ensuring, in each case, that the degree of the individual's knowledge of SCI would not be unnecessarily risked by granting the exception.

Knowledge of current value is detailed knowledge of the US intelligence capability and its degree of success with regard to one or more sources or disciplines gained as a regular recipient and/or user of intelligence product affecting a specific target or geographic area, or extensive knowledge of the US intelligence effort, including degree of success of collection systems or methods, technical material, processing techniques, magnitude of effort, sensitive security procedures, and product that would reveal source or methods, collection plans, and intelligence liaison and cooperation relationships. Recipients of intelligence product, not revealing any of the foregoing and indoctrinated persons whose duties are confined to administrative support, do not necessarily fall into this category.
